QuestionsComments: Please consider adopting more non-animal testing methods. Not only do non-animal testing methods provide more accurate and more meaningful results when it comes to the health of the human population, but non-animal testing will also help to put an end to the needless suffering of animals in laboratories. Using non-animal testing methods is a "win-win" situation for humans and animals. We, as humans, get better health research and care and animals no longer have to suffer through painful procedures. Why wouldn't we want more "win-win" solutions? Europe has adopted multiple non-animal testing methods and it is about time the U.S. did as well.
